THE TREDGAR IRON WORKS—RICHMOND, VA.—These historic Iron Works, which did such immense and famous service during the war in supplying the armies and forts of the Confederacy with artillery pieces of the most improved pattern, and which, since its close, has so strikingly illustrated the fact that in no city on the continent can great mechanical and manufacturing enterprises be established with better prospects of success than in Richmond; and no where are mechanics of worth and intelligence appreciated in a higher degree than in this same beautiful city on the James.

The Tredgar works enjoy the advantage of being supplied with water-power from the James, with which the machinery is operated. Its rolling mills contain twenty-five puddling furnaces, fourteen reheating furnaces, four trains of finishing rolls and one forge train.

The establishment can turn out 350 tons of railroad iron per week, or 80 tons of spikes, &c., per day.

The foundry has three air furnaces and three cupolas, with a daily capacity of eighty tons. Here are made car wheels, bridge castings, &c. Two of the air furnaces are equal to the demands of the heaviest work, and enable fifty tons of iron to be melted into a single mass.

The car factory turns out eighteen freight cars per week, which are sold to the various railroads south and west of Richmond. Then in the blacksmith shop are thirty forges, which are kept busy finishing cars.

In machinery the owners of the Tredgar keep pace with all the improvements of the day, knowing that they can only compete successfully with the North by having machinery of equal excellence with Northern manufacturers. The result is, that whatever is made at these works, from a spike to a car, is equal to the best made anywhere else.

The establishment uses about 20,000 tons of coal annually, and gives employment to nearly 800 hands, among whom are mechanics whose skill and practical wisdom would make them conspicuous in any community in the world. Very nearly $400,000 are paid out annually for wages alone, being largely over $1,000 per day.

We have already stated in the Enquirer that the Tredgar Works are shipping spokes to Cincinnati for the Mississippi and Ohio railroad, and that they have a contract for the bridges on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad beyond the White Sulphur.

When the projected bridge to connect the Tredgar with the Danville railroad shall have been finished, great trouble in the transportation of cars, &c., will be avoided.

The example of these works ought to stimulate capitalists to the erection of other large establishments here. Richmond is to be made great by manufacturers, and the sooner we begin on a large scale the better. A sermon might be profitably preached every month to our business men and moneyed citizens from the text, "Look at Philadelphia! What made her what she is?" Richmond Enquirer.

"THE RING" and the "Fancy."—From the New York Herald.—"The Canadian Sheriff who so bravely put an end to the Mace-Coburn fight, and averted a thousand New York desperadoes into submission by the dread recital of the Canadian statutes, must have been himself amazed at the ready obedience which the majesty of Canadian law, as represented within his own person, enforced upon the formidable crowd. Doubtless, however, he comprehended the reason, now that he mourns the loss of his thirty-five guinea gold watch. His assistant, who also ventured into the ring, and endorsed by his presence the reading of those Canadian statutes, has ere this probably discovered that his valuable jewelry is also missing; and no doubt the gallant militiamen from Simcoe, who stayed boldly back in the woods, supporting the representatives of civil law at a safe distance, have to thank their discretion for any valuables that they may still retain about their persons. From the manner in which the first round of the fight commenced—Joe Coburn backing away from his antagonist, and an hour elapsing without a blow being struck or even a feeler being put in—it is evident that the intention of the fight was to get money out of some body's pockets, and there is no better way to inaugurate the new system than by taking it out of the pockets of the "kanucks."

The fact is, these honest artisans, who turn their mechanical genius to the freecroing of human faces for amusement, are very generous. They charge no admission and demand no contributions; and yet they have heavy monetary expenses to bear. It costs something to draw claret as lavishly as they do, and "getting into chancery" so frequently is sure to entail a heavy bill of fees, likely, according to accepted tradition, to eat up all the property involved. They require some income, therefore, and apparently have no way of getting it, except the way in which they got the Sheriff's watch. They are certainly pardonable, and he recalls the respectful attention which they paid to the statutes of the Dominion, relative to the wickedness and penalty of prize fighting, will forgive them. He read nothing relative to the wickedness and penalty of larceny and pocket-picking on that occasion, and the repentant prize fighters probably thought that there was no wickedness or penalty attached to these latter irregularities in Canada, or else the Sheriff would have told them.

PEACHES.—Dover was somewhat excited on Tuesday by the appearance of a large number of fruit-growers of this State and Maryland, who assembled for the purpose of canvassing the prospects of a large crop of peaches, and to discuss the best and cheapest plan of getting the same to market when ripe. The growers from all parts of the peach section report that the trees are as full of peaches as they can well bear, and that the crop will, unless something now expected occurs, reach at least 3,500,000 baskets, about 500,000 more than were gathered in 1869, the champion peach year. This increase over 1869 is based upon the fact that thousands of new trees will come into bearing for the first time, and that the extension of the Maryland and Delaware and Kent railroads have stimulated the business of fruit growing along the line of these roads. From 300,000 to 500,000 new trees have been planted this season, not only to supply the place of those that may die but to increase the total annual product. Delaware Gazette.
